The application process detailed in this document is designed to enable YOKOHAMA National University to select applicants for the YOKOHAMA Socrates Program (YNU Program for SOCIally Resilient And susTainable EcoSystems), a global education program in the university's Department of Urban and Social Collaboration within the College of Urban Sciences. Selection will be based on the applicant's submitted documents, essay, and online interview. Admitted students will enroll in the College of Urban Sciences, working towards a Bachelor of Arts degree.

About the YOKOHAMA Socrates Program

The YOKOHAMA Socrates Program is centered around the issues and methodologies in the humanities and social sciences related to the twin themes of social resilience and social sustainability. It is a bilingual global education program in the YNU College of Urban Sciences enabling students to obtain a bachelor's degree with English (primary) and Japanese (secondary) as common languages. In the first years after admission, students will take courses that have English as the language of instruction. They will also enroll in Japanese language courses if their proficiency in Japanese is not native level. After obtaining the required level of Japanese language proficiency, students will be able to join classes and seminars conducted in Japanese together with students in the College of Urban Sciences. Students will participate in small classes, including seminars conducted through the dialogue-based Socratic method. Graduation theses will be co-supervised by two faculty members who will advise students with the aim of enabling them to utilize appropriate methodologies for using their own mental faculties for thinking deeply about issues of our times.

Admission Policy

The YOKOHAMA Socrates Program will educate students to become capable of engaging competently with political, economic, and social issues in local and global contexts from the standpoint of social resilience and social sustainability.
